PROGRAM CODE VERSION ENFORCEMENT

ABSTRACT

Implementations described and claimed herein enforce versions of program code on a client based on an operating policy during execution of the software. The version of program code on the client is checked for compliance with the operating policy when the client attempts to execute the program code or access a resource. If the program code on the client does not comply with the operating policy, the client is unable to execute the noncompliant program code or access the resource.